WORK BY 101 CONTEMPORARY SCULPTORS TO BE SHOWN AT METROPOLITAN MUSEUM IN EXHIBITION AMERICAN SCULPTURE 1951 OPENING ON FRIDAY, DECEMBER 7TH

NEW YORK, Nov 15 - Names of 101 sculptors whose work has been admitted to the nationwide competitive exhibition, AMERICAN SCULPTURE 1951, were announced today by The Metropolitan Museum of Art. The show will open December 7 in the Great Hall of the Museum and continue through February 24.

Representing a very broad view of contemporary sculpture in America, the pieces to be shown were chosen from among the entries of 1,066 artists by a Jury of Admissions, which made its selections from three photographs of each work submitted. On the jury were sculptors Donal Hord of California, Robert Laurent of Indiana, and Hugo Robus, David Smith, William Zorach, and Cecil Howard of New York, as well as Robert Beverly Hale,Associate Curator of American Art at the Metropolitan.

"The exhibition will include artists ranging from the academicians to the experimentalists," said Roland McKinney, Consultant in American Art who is in charge of the show. "Many young sculptors are represented, although a majority are well established in both a critical and popular sense. They come from eighteen states. New York is well ahead with 56 - more than half the total number."

Prizes totalling $8,500 offered by the Trustees of the Museum will be awarded four of the sculptors the evening of December 4, the day of the preview for contributing artists. First prize is $3,500, second prize $2,500, third prize $1,500, and fourth prize $1,000. The selection will be made by a Jury of Awards, composed of Jose de Creeft and Jacques Lipchitz, New York City sculptors, and Henri Marceau, Associate Director of the Philadelphia Museum of Art.

This is the second of three large competitive exhibitions planned in line with the policy announced by the Museum in January, 1949, of increasing its activity in the field of current American art. It was preceded in 1950 by a show of paintings and will be followed, next year. by an exhibition of water colors, drawings, and prints. The three year cycle will then have covered the work of artists in all media.

Only sculptors living in the United States or its territories were eligible for the competition and no work executed prior to 1942 was admitted. Brochures announcing the show and inviting entry were mailed to more than 3400 artists, many of whom submitted the maximum number of three works. In accordance with the rules of the competition, no more than one piece by an artist will be shown.

Since most of the works are for sale, prices will be given in the catalogue of the show. Although the Museum will not negotiate or conduct sales, it will refer prospective buyers to the artists or their agents.

The Museum's last exhibition of work by contemporary sculptors took place in 1942 as a part of the Artists For Victory Show.
